Aug 17, 2021 NET 4.7 Framework...In Microsoft's continuous support of .NET, .NET Framework 4.7 provides new features, tools, and more, bringing it in line with the .NET Core Framework... In a Thursday press release, media company Tubi revealed that it had acquired Crunchyroll. Tubi is the exclusive streaming partner of the anime site, which is a U.S. online streaming site for anime. Crunchyroll also runs a website that offers simulcasts and a catalog for overseas purchases. The terms of the deal were not disclosed. Tubi, the award-winning subscription service that provides endless entertainment to anyone, anywhere, offered a $25 million cash tender. It was among the companies whose applications for a $50 million cash tender were rejected by the Federal Communications Commission in September 2014. Tubi primarily serves as a streaming site. According to its website, Tubi has over 13 million paid users and around 100,000 unique visitors per day. It is available on the web and via the Tubi mobile app, which is available on iOS and Android. The company has a long list of notable tech partners, including DirecTV and PlayStation, but it is notable for its anime content. In addition to the Crunchyroll catalog, Tubi has had partnerships with Japanese companies such as Kadokawa, which publishes light novel and video game company Atlus, and Bandai Namco Games, which publishes the Guilty Gear series. Tubi and Crunchyroll have worked together to release simulcasts of anime in the U.S. Crunchyroll is one of Japan's most successful anime distribution sites. While it was only founded in 2006, it has grown to become the third-most visited site in Japan. It offers simulcasts of Japanese anime along with recent hits, and it has a sizable library of older titles. Crunchyroll is also a storefront, with a large library of anime and manga. Crunchyroll was founded by a former Microsoft executive, and it has agreements with companies such as Bandai Namco Games, FUNimation, Crunchyroll, Sentai Filmworks, and Viz Media. Crunchyroll is also a digital distributor for Asia's TV Tokyo properties.
